CHRIS SIZELOVE - MSG(R), U.S. ARMY

Chris joins Blue Force Gear having recently retired from the Army after twenty years of service; sixteen in the 75th Ranger Regiment followed by four years with the Defense Intelligence Agency. While in the Ranger Regiment he became both a subject matter expert and instructor for carbine, pistol, CQB, and forced entry methods as well as joint operations in general as an assaulter and strike force senior NCO. During that time he was also a sniper and a senior NCO of a joint Reconnaissance platoon. In the role of the 75th's Master Breacher, he led both training as well as research and development for forced entry of all types. Chris also propagated and instructed covert carry and vehicle TTP's for specific roles within the Regiment as well as the Defense Intelligence Agency.

"In his role as the Director of Training at Blue Force Gear, Chris will be expanding on the company's vision statement of "To equip millions of good people with the gear, knowledge, and mindset they need to be always better" via developing curriculum and conducting specialized training with military, law enforcement and responsible U.S. citizens."
